The Role of an Association Representative

Each worksite has an elected Association Representative (or AR for short). The most effective ARs are both advocates and organizers. They educate union members about our rights, advocate for members, unite members around a common purpose or problem, help members find solutions, and motivate union members to take part in union actions to solve problems and improve the workplace. SDEA Core Trainings, Part 1: Advocacy and Part 2: Organizing are offered annually to empower ARs to be strong advocates and organizers at work. ARs also attend monthly meetings of the SDEA Representative Council, a decision-making body of the union, at which ARs and Council Representatives from across SDEA come together to learn and set the direction for the union.

The Role of a Council Representative

Worksites with more than 30 members have one or more Council Representatives (or CR for short). CRs assist ARs in building the union at work and attend monthly meetings of the SDEA Representative Council as voting members. SDEA Core Trainings, Part 1: Advocacy and Part 2: Organizing are offered annually to empower CRs to be strong advocates and organizers at work.

The Role of an Alternate

It's a good idea for each work site to elect an alternate member to act in place of the AR or CR should he or she be unable to attend a Representative Council meeting.
